

What is Stepping into Play?

Stepping into Play is a six-week programme that empowers parents and carers to provide high value play with low cost resources for their children. It is one of the most comprehensive and fun programmes to run with parents/carers on the importance of play.

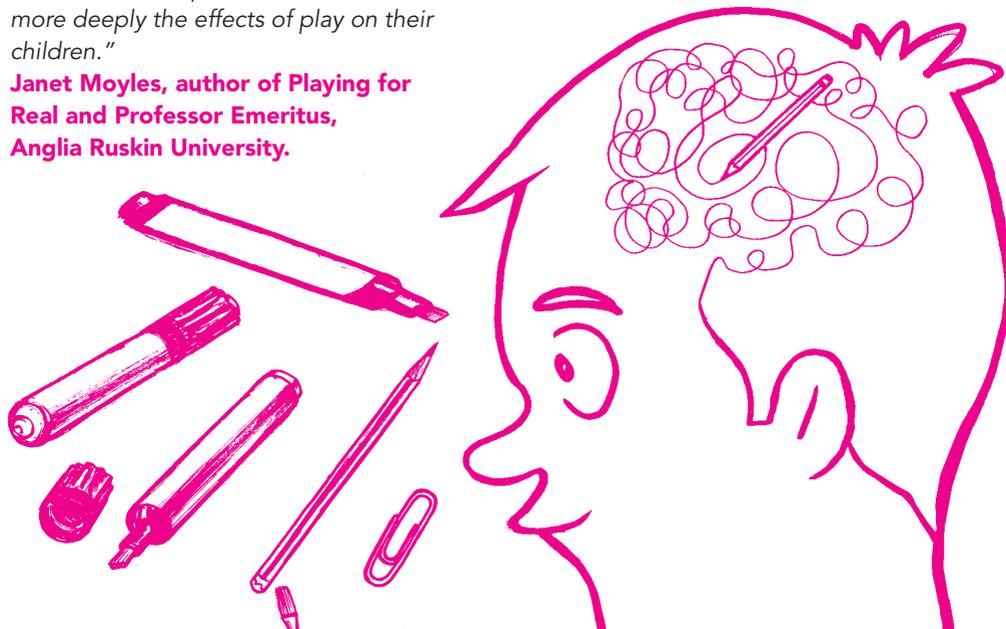

Staff can deliver the programme using the Stepping into Play facilitators' manual which contains a detailed agenda for each session, explanatory notes, hand-outs and activity sheets. It is a priceless resource for your organisation to use again and again.

"A fantastic resource which could be used with families from all areas within a multitude of settings and environments which advocate 'play' as the greatest gift to children."

Elaine Langler, owner of Teenytots nursery, Hull

"Stepping into Play has great potential to benefit many parents and practitioners... it will enable them to play, have fun and learn and, in the process, understand more deeply the effects of play on their children."

Janet Moyles, author of Playing for Real and Professor Emeritus, Anglia Ruskin University.

The facilitators' training day

The Stepping into Play Facilitators' training day is aimed at staff who deliver programmes to parents/carers. The training day will enable delegates to:

- understand how to accommodate different learning styles;
- understand how to deliver the Stepping into Play programme most effectively;
- experience activities from Stepping into Play;
- ask questions about the programme.

The day will be highly participatory and lots of fun, reflecting the ethos of Stepping into Play programme.

Participants will receive

- a Certificate of Approved Trainer
- the Stepping into Play facilitators' manual and CD
